In one of the old colonial songs the pressed, of the thinking spiritual leadskipper of a New England coaster re- ers of the churches. lates his singular experience in running into a Methodist meeting house in the open sea. A freshet in the Connecticut river rose to unusual heights, and had lifted a Methodist meeting house from its foundations and carried it down to Long Island sound, while the tides were sweeping it out into the Atlantic beyond Montauk point. It was this sacred edifice, sea-sick and deserted, with its steeple "dowsed" every few minutes in the waves, that struck terror during the night into the soul of this demoralized skipper. For, in the song, he describes all of the terrible sights of his many voyages, but the running into a Methodist meeting house upon the ocean, while he was running with a free sheet, was the most thrilling of all. In the Waikiki district the moving disease has been virulent. One of the largest of the residences, near Kapiolani park, during the absence of the owner, moved away some distance and took up a new position on the beach. The distracted owner only found it, through an advertisement in the "Lost" column of the Advertiser. This incident, it may be parenthetically stated, shows the value of advertising in this journal. Several other houses, in this district, have also walked off, and the occupants of the quietest and most tranquil mansions retire at night in fear lest they wake up elsewhere. The recent erection of several large houses in the district tends to create social discord, and annexation, besides, has fed the microbes of this disease of the moving spirit. The Board of Health and the police will do their duty.
